

I recently wrote a blog discussing some of the fallacies and myths surrounding "real" long-term investing especially as it relates to young millennial investors. The valuation levels when you start investing, have everything to do with the ultimate outcomes. You can read the full article here:

---